For some time little progress was apparent, the water simply receiving the tons of material and showing no sign. At length, however, towards the end of last year, at low tide evidences of the gradual reclamation of the patch marked on began to show, and thenceforward the work be came more and more visible, especially when the wall had been built up to high water mark Presently the space assumed the appearance of a miniature inland sea, in which crowds of boats Woog Puk came and reported that a man laden with earth and stones were continually coming and going, and rapidly diminishing the three Hakka women shouted out when area still under water. At the present time the whole reclaimed area is filled in though not quite all raised to the proper level. This work. however, will be a matter of weeks at most.

To those of our readers at a distance a few details of the extent of this section of the Re clamation may be interesting. It extends from court of Craigieburn. He slipped upon the the Murray Wharf on the east to Ics House Street on the west, which thoroughfare will be outlined to the new Prays Wall. The total area of the land reclaimed is 466,000 square feet, or roughly 10% seres. The distance from the face of the old sea wall the face of the new sea wall is 575 feet at the western end and 284 feet at the eastern end There were used for reclaiming the land no less than 140,000 cable yards (170,000 tons) of rubble stone in foundations of sea wall, drains, &c., and 400,000 subic yards (540,000 tons) of earth for filling in the ground. The wall has been solidly built of granite with concrete backing, and the drains, laid on a rubble foundation, which was sllowed a long time to settle, are of cut granite. The earth used was nearly all brought in boats, the small balance being builders' rubbish throws in by permission of the engineer. road leading down to Murray Wharf will be continued to the new sea wall. > Antiquaries and lovers of Old London will be appalled to hear that no fe for than nine more of the City churches are marked out for destruction. The first to be d molished is All Hallows the Great, and we are told by way of consolationthat it possesses nothing of interest except a chancel-screen, which is to be set up in some charch to be selected by the Archbishop of Canterbury after consultation with the Conneil of the Institute of British Architects, It is to be hoped that this is the last city church that will be pulled down for a long time to come No doubt there are more charches within the lomai, of the Lord Mayor than are required by he population, and in almost all cases the site are extremely valuable, and the money obtained for them can be used for building and endowing churches in populous neighbourhoods. But here is snother side to the question, and the destruction of ancient buildings, many of them cal associations, is an act of vandalism which it is not easy to justify.
